v.	:	DOCKET NO. 269 MD 2001
RELIANCE INSURANCE COMPANY, Defendant.	:

LIQUIDATOR'S RESPONSE TO OBJECTION OF DELOITTE & TOUCHE LLP AND JAN A. LOMMELE TO THE PETITION TO APPROVE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT OF RELIANCE DIRECTOR AND OFFICER LITIGATION

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

Plaintiff M. Diane Koken, Insurance Commissioner of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in her capacity as Liquidator of Reliance Insurance Company, hereby files her Response to the objection of Defendants Deloitte & Touche LLP and Jan A. Lommele ("Deloitte"), to the Liquidator's Petition to Approve Settlement Agreement of Reliance Director and Officer Litigation, Koken v. Steinberg, et al., 421 M.D. 2002 (the "D&O Action"). For the reasons set forth below and in the Liquidator's Petition seeking the Court's approval of the Settlement Agreement, Deloitte's objection should be overruled.

The settlement to which Deloitte objects was negotiated over many months by and between the Liquidator and the Defendants in the D&O Action under the auspices of a Court-appointed mediator, who helped the parties strike a legally enforceable agreement consistent with Pennsylvania law. Under it, the Liquidator will provide the Director and Officer ("D&O") Defendants with a release consistent with settled Pennsylvania case law, as interpreted by Griffin

v. United States, 500 F.2d 1059 (3d Cir. 1974) and Charles v. Giant Eagle Markets, 522 A.2d 1 (1987). A bargained-for benefit of this release provides the Liquidator with the opportunity to collect from Deloitte a sum representing its pro rata share of liability, as determined by the jury, even if the amount of Deloitte's pro rata liability as determined by the jury is in a dollar amount less than the amount paid by the D&O Defendants pursuant to the Settlement Agreement with the Liquidator. Deloitte's Objection seeks to preserve the "right" to strip away this bargained-for benefit, thereby interjecting an unexpected element of uncertainty into the settlement and potentially undermining the Liquidator's ability to collect sums for policyholders. Deloitte's objection should be overruled.

DELOITTE ADMITS THAT IT SEEKS REVIEW OF A MATTER NOT RIPE FOR ADJUDICATION

1. Deloitte admits that the issue raised by its objection is "not ripe" for review and that it would only become ripe, if at all, after trial. It further admits that the issue may never become ripe. See Deloitte Objection, ¶ 8. This dooms the objection. Courts cannot consider requests for opinions or rulings of hypothetical matters not ripe for adjudication. "It is impermissible for courts to render purely advisory opinions." Erie Ins. Exch. v. Claypoole, 673 A.2d 348, 352 (Pa. Super. 1996). Instead, a case or controversy must exist before a court can adjudicate a claim. See Borough of Marcus Hook v. Pennsylvania Mun. Retirement Bd., 720 A.2d 803, 804 (Pa. Commw. 1998") ([T]he courts of this Commonwealth may not exercise jurisdiction to decide issues that do not determine the resolution of an actual case or controversy."). Since Deloitte admits that its objection "is not ripe," the objection should be overruled on this basis alone.

IN ANY EVENT, DELOITTE SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO UNDERMINE THE FINALITY OF THE SETTLEMENT REACHED AFTER A COURT-SPONSORED MEDIATION

2. The respective obligations of the parties to a lawsuit can be finally determined either by way of a bona fide settlement or through trial. The Commonwealth has a strong public policy which favors settlement. See, e.g., Charles, 552 A.2d 1 (Pa. 1987).

3. "The inducements for a defendant to settle are the certainty of the agreed-upon obligation and the avoidance of the vagaries of trial." Charles, supra, 552 A.2d at 3.

4. Through its objection, Deloitte seeks to preserve a legally unsupportable benefit arising out of the D&O settlement. It seeks to be excused from paying the full amount that a jury may determine it should pay as a result of its own wrong.

5. Deloitte's objection, bottomed on the concern that it may have to pay a so-called "windfall" to the Liquidator, should be rejected as it is unabashedly inconsistent with established Pennsylvania law under Charles. Deloitte admits this. With respect to its obligations under the joint tortfeasor release, Deloitte seeks to "preserve" its "right to challenge the Charles holding" at a future date.[1] Deloitte's Objection, ¶8. Deloitte's objection – if ultimately accepted – would permit it to pay an amount less than that attributed to it by the jury. Such a position is inconsistent with Pennsylvania public policy as it would discourage recalcitrant defendants from settling.

[1] Deloitte apparently seeks the right to challenge the Supreme Court's decision in Charles while, at the same time, reaping the substantial benefits of Charles and the pro rata set-off contemplated by the Settlement Agreement in the event its challenge is unsuccessful. Deloitte should not be permitted to preserve an attack on Charles while, at the same time, reap its benefits.

6. Deloitte's argument is based upon a fundamentally flawed premise. It assumes that the jury verdict in its case more accurately measures the tortfeasor's obligation than that which is agreed upon between the parties by way of settlement. But there is no basis to conclude that a jury verdict must serve as a cap on the total recovery that a plaintiff may receive.

The Court in Charles provided the following illustration:

> There is no precise measure of the amount of wrong. Even if the trial is as to damages only, successive juries would rarely make the identical appraisal. Nor is there reason to suppose that the jury's evaluation of losses is more accurate than the evaluation made by the parties to the settlement. Surely where liability is contested, the verdict may not reflect the exact worth of the injuries. When the cost of litigation is taken into account, it becomes still more difficult to say that enforcement of the judgment debtor's pro rata liability would enrich the plaintiff.

Id. at 3 (citing Theobald v. Angelos, 208 A.2d 129, 135 (N.J. 1965)).

7. Holding Deloitte liable for its full proportionate share advances Pennsylvania's strong policy of favoring settlements by refusing to reward a recalcitrant non-settling defendant who holds out the hope that it will be able to characterize the verdict as a "windfall" and thereby pay less than the full amount owed. See Charles, 522 A.2d at 3. Deloitte should not be permitted to interject needless uncertainty into the legal interpretation of the settlement reached by the Liquidator and the D&O Defendants. Deloitte's objection to the Settlement Agreement should be overruled.

DELOITTE'S OBJECTION IS NOT SUPPORTED BY PENNSYLVANIA STATUTES

8. Deloitte argues that the Uniform Contribution Among Tortfeasors Act ("UCATA") 42 Pa. C.S.A. § 8231, et seq., supports its objection to the Settlement Agreement. This is not true. Deloitte's analysis is incomplete – it improperly focuses on a single aspect of Pennsylvania's statutory scheme and ignores the courts' interpretation and application of the overall scheme.

9. Pennsylvania's Comparative Negligence statute directs that all defendants shall be liable for their portion of damages as determined at trial. See 42 Pa. C.S. § 7102. The version of the Comparative Negligence statute applicable to causes of action that accrued prior to August 19, 2002 (such as those at issue in the actions against Deloitte and the D&O Defendants) provides that joint tortfeasors shall be held jointly and severally liable:

> Where recovery is allowed against more than one defendant, each defendant shall be liable for that proportion of the total dollar amount awarded as damages in the ratio of the amount of his causal negligence to the amount of causal negligence attributed to all defendants against whom recovery is allowed. The Plaintiff may recover the full amount of the allowed recovery from any defendant against whom the plaintiff is not barred from recovery. Any defendant who is so compelled to pay more than his percentage share may seek contribution.

42 Pa. C.S. § 7102(b) (subsequently amended for actions accruing on or after 8/19/02).[2]

10. Prior to the Comparative Negligence Act, the portion or percentage of liability of each tortfeasor was, as a matter of equity, equal in proportion to the number of tortfeasors. Under the comparative negligence statute, the liability of each tortfeasor is fixed by law and depends on a question of fact determined by an apportionment of the causal negligence attributable to all the tortfeasors. Where a defendant and plaintiff enter into a release, such as the one executed by the

[2] The General Assembly amended Pennsylvania's Comparative Negligence statute two years ago, resulting in the deletion of subsection (b), with an effective date of August 19, 2002. See Act of June 19, 2002, P.L. 394, No. 57 (effective in 60 days). As the claims underlying these actions occurred prior to the effective date of this amendment, the prior version of § 7102 is applicable here. The amendments are not relevant to Deloitte case.

Liquidator and the D&O Defendants, the release should operate to satisfy only that percentage of the judgment plaintiff ultimately recovers as the settling tortfeasor's causal negligence bears to all the causal negligence of all the tortfeasors.

11. Pennsylvania's statutory scheme, properly interpreted, rebuts Deloitte's arguments in support of its Objection. Section 8326 of the UCATA provides:

> A release by the injured person of one joint tort-feasor, whether before or after judgment, does not discharge the other tortfeasors unless the release so provides, but reduces the claim against the other tort-feasors in the amount of the consideration paid for the release or in any amount or proportion by which the release provides that the total claim shall be reduced if greater than the consideration paid.

42 Pa.C.S. § 8326. Based on the facts in Charles, the Court explained that this section "affords the parties to the release an option to determine the amount or proportion by which the total claim shall be reduced provided that the total claim is greater than the consideration paid." Charles, 522 A.2d at 4-5. Subsequent case law and statutory analysis make clear that the same analysis and policy considerations apply, regardless of the amount of the jury's verdict, i.e., the non-settling defendants receive the benefit of a pro rata set-off for the percentage amount of liability the jury attributes to the settling defendants. See Walton v. Avco Corp., 610 A.2d 454 (Pa. 1992) (non-settling tortfeasor remains liable for full proportionate share of the damage award regardless of the amount paid by settling defendant). A non-settling defendant, such as Deloitte here, remains liable for its pro rata share of the verdict. See 42 Pa. C.S. § 7102; Walton, 610 A.2d at 457.

12. The D&O Defendants' release will satisfy that percentage amount of the case for which liability is found to be attributable to them by the jury – the dollar amount of the jury's award is irrelevant with respect to this issue. As explained in the concurring opinion in Charles:

> The argument that Appellant is receiving a $3900.00 windfall is misplaced and wrongly endorsed by the [lower courts]. Giant Eagle did not condition its payment to Appellant on the basis that if it overpaid its liability it could seek a refund from Appellant. In this regard the terms of the release are controlling. The only party who had a legal right to complain about the amount it paid for the release chose to waive its right of complaint. The release does not transfer any such right to Stanley. Stanley could only complain of windfall if it were being compelled to pay more than its 40% of causal negligence.

522 A.2d at 5 (Papadakos, J., concurring). The concurring opinion further explained that the Charles decision awarded the Appellant the benefit of his bargain with Giant Eagle ($22,500.00) and the amount awarded to him by the verdict against Stanley ($12,400.00) for a total of $34,900.00. This is so even though the full verdict was for $31,000.00. Importantly, if the settlement with Giant Eagle had been for less than $18,600.00, Appellant would have borne the loss and received a total recovery of less than the verdict of $31,000.00.

13. Deloitte ignores this analysis and, instead, improperly focuses on a purported "windfall" that could possibly occur in the future, depending upon the jury award should the case with Deloitte go to trial and verdict.

THERE IS NO SUPPORT FOR DELOITTE'S ASSERTION THAT THE PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT HAS EXPRESSED AN INTENT TO REVISIT THE HOLDING OF CHARLES V. GIANT EAGLE MARKETS

14. Deloitte's argument is premised on an incorrect interpretation and application of Pennsylvania law and the viability of well-established case law. An accurate review of Pennsylvania Supreme Court decisions undermines Deloitte's argument regarding the viability of Charles. In the first place, Charles was decided by our Supreme Court more than 18 years ago and remains good law today.[3] While the Charles decision has been distinguished by cases with different facts or held not to apply in certain circumstances, it plainly remains good law. Contrary to Deloitte's suggestion, the Supreme Court repeatedly has cited Charles over the past 18 years to support its analyses and decisions in other cases. There is no support for Deloitte's speculative assertion that the Supreme Court has expressed an intent to "revisit" Charles. In fact, in Walton v. Avco Corp., 610 A.2d 454, 461 (Pa. 1992), the Court specifically stated that it "remain[s] committed to promoting the policies that fueled our decision in [Charles]." Rather than question Charles, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court continues to apply its pirnciples. See, e.g., Taylor v. Solberg, 778 A.2d 664 (Pa. 2001). This Court also has applied the principles of Charles, without mention of pending reversal or "revisit" by the Supreme Court. See, e.g., Hanselman v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 632 A.2d 607 (Pa. Commw. 1993).

15. Federal courts also recognize the continuing viability of Charles and have regularly applied it as controlling on issues of Pennsylvania law. For example, in Montgomery County v. Microvote Corp., 320 F.3d 440 (3d Cir. 2003), the Third Circuit cited Charles in denying the non-settling defendants arguments regarding set-off of settlement proceeds, stating that "[u]nder Pennsylvania law, a 'non-settling tortfeasor is required to pay his full pro-rata share.'" Microvote, 320 F.3d at 450 (quoting Charles v. Giant Eagle Markets, 522 A.2d 1, 2 (Pa. 1987)). See also Weber v. GAF Corp., 15 F.3d 35 (3d Cir. 1994) (citing Charles in rejecting

[3] Justice Zappala dissented in Charles, but the remaining members of the Court agreed with the portion of the decision at issue here. Justice Papadakos filed a concurring opinion, joined by Justice Larsen, which actually added analysis regarding the relationship between joint non-settling defendants' claim that delay damages were an impermissible "windfall"); Koppers Co., Inc. v Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., 98 F.3d 1440, 1453 (citing Pennsylvania law as determined in Charles).

16. In addition to ignoring the history and precedential value of Charles, Deloitte supports its objection with the following claim: "The Charles holding has been questioned, and the Supreme Court has itself suggested that it might be willing to revisit that holding in a proper case." Deloitte Objection, ¶ 7 (citing Baker v. AC&S, 755 A.2d 664, 671 n.6 (Pa. 2000)). With respect to the first part of this assertion, that the Charles holding "has been questioned," Deloitte fails to provide any meaningful support for this claim.

17. Finally, putting aside Deloitte's fallacious argument with regard to the dicta in footnote 6 of Baker, since the Baker decision in 2000, the Supreme Court has clearly acknowledged the continuing validity of Charles. See Taylor v. Solberg, 778 A.2d 664 (Pa. 2001). Thus, even assuming that a prior composition of the Court indicated that it might revisit Charles, cases since the Baker decision in 2000 have established the continuing validity of Charles.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the Liquidator respectfully requests that this Court enter an Order overruling Deloitte's objection to the Settlement Agreement entered into by the Liquidator and the D&O Defendants. The Court should not create for Deloitte rights that do not tortfeasors under Pennsylvania statutory provisions. Thus, 6 members of the Court joined Chief Justice Nix's majority opinion, with only Justice Zappala dissenting.

otherwise exist. Deloitte is attempting to obtain and preserve appellate rights unavailable to other parties, based upon its incorrect and incomplete application of Pennsylvania statutes and case law. Contrary to Deloitte's argument, Charles v. Giant Eagle remains good law more than 18 years after it was decided by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. Deloitte's objection to the Settlement Agreement should be overruled.
